Remembering C. P. Brown

Charles Phillip Brown, or C. P. Brown, is one of the Britishers who helped our Indian mankind. Without him, Telugu language may have not been existed, and would become extinct.

Brown had to learn Telugu for the purpose of job from a Telugu Scholar named Velagapudi Kodandarama. He learnt it in 16 months. After learning, he saw the importance of Telugu. Brown wanted to publish old unpublished Telugu Books.

For publishing, he appointed Scholars on his own cost. He invited them to his Bungalow and named the team “Vagdevi”. Brown made them recheck the old versions and created filtered versions. The result of his efforts are the present books of Vemana Poems, Manu Charithra, Palnaati Veera Charithra, Vasu Charithra, Kalaapurnodayam, Bible Stories, and Many More. He also wrote English-Telugu & Telugu-English Dictionaries which are useful even today. He worked for Telugu language for his whole life. He translated Vemana Poems to English. If we create a list for his deeds, it would be near to endless. Like that, He worked very hard to bring up it, and we? We are forgetting it on the name of International Language, General Language, For Job Purposes, etc... But, we should not forget our language and culture on the name of education and job. Remember,

Desha Bhashalandu Telugu Lessa.
